

Alexander Pope: The Poet in Poems (Princeton Legacy Library)

What is the precise relation between the Pope of the poems and the Pope of history? Seeking to clarify the nature of the intimate link between the historical self and the idealized self of the poetry, Dustin Griffin examines the various ways in which Popes poems may be said to be self-expressive. He brings a sensitive critical reading of the texts and an impressive knowledge of the poets life and writings to his discussion of poems from the entire range of the poets career. The author argues that Pope is present in his poems as a private person whose special imaginative and psychological concerns emerge because they are expressed publicly. In some poems, Pope confronts quite openly his fervent moral idealism with his powerful aggressive feelings, and he explores his conflicting impulses toward retirement and engagement. In others, he reveals impulses and attractions that he would not admit to full consciousness in his letters. Pope is also present as poet-protagonist, self-consciously attempting to present and master a body of poetic material. Professor Griffins study recovers some of the personal energy that invigorates Popes greatest poems and makes them strikingly self-expressive products of an imagination intrigued and often at odds with itself and, yet more sharply, with the world.
